Maudsley Appointed City Clerk

Peter Mawdsley was appointed to fill the unexpired term of the late Saidee Van Brower as city clerk at a special meeting of the city council Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

He has been a resident of Carmel for 21 years, and at the time of his taking this new office was already serving the city as financial adviser in which capacity he also serves the Carmel School District.

Three years ago he opposed

Dark Horse Entry Planned in Lions Easter Egg Derby

There will be an Easter gift for every child who enters the Lions Club first Annual Egg Hunt Easter Sunday afternoon at Devendorf Plaza, and prizes for those who win the events presented by Mrs. Harrison Godwin, Kenneth Carleton, who is in charge of arrangements, said yesterday.

The Lions are planning a tremendous day for all Carmel children from the two year olds up to the biggies, aged 12. Adults who gather to root for the contestants will have their share of entertainment for there will be band music. Lloyd Weer, champion master of ceremonies, is grooming himself to put on his top performance, and there is to be a dark horse entry in the two-year-olders' event that will make Carmel history. It is anticipated that the services of the Special Police, who will be on hand to keep the spectators within bounds, will be needed at this point of the festivities.

A greeting from Mayor P. A. McCreery, and a brief reminder of the significance of the day by Dr. James E. Crowther will precede the contest. Then the youngsters, shepherded by their class room teachers at Sunset, will enter the events which will be ar-

CHINESE PIONEERS AND A LETTER FROM ARCHIE

Humor, old tales about Carmel, and a fine feeling of appreciation for a special group of early settlers go into the article about the Chinese Pioneers by Joseph Hitchcock on the feature page of this issue.

Hitchcock, born here of pioneer family, (his grandfather was standard bearer for Commodore Sloat), knows early Carmel of his own generation from first hand experience. He drove the horse-drawn stage over The Hill when Carmel was a village of sand streets and wooden buildings. He helped plant the Pines on Ocean avenue. Of the history of Monterey Peninsula before his time he has a wealth of stories passed on to him by his parents and grandparents.

Also on the feature page is another letter from Dr. Francis E. Lloyd's termite, Archie. He boasts with pardonable pride about the astonishing houses the Australian termites build with an eye to guard against the rain and to take full advantage of the sun.

Lieutenant Arne F. Halle Gets His Commission Hard Way in Signal Corps

Lieutenant Arne F. Halle arrived from the East by plane last week, spending the time between Thursday and Tuesday visiting old haunts and friends.

It was less than a year ago—on May 4, 1942, that he left his post as assistant cashier in the Bank of Carmel, where he had served in an executive capacity for the past 13 years, to enter the U.S. army signal corps. He is the first of the local boys to climb steadily up the hard way to a commission as 2nd lieutenant in this exacting branch of the service. He graduated on Mar. 23 from officers' training school at Fort Monmouth, N. J., ranking high in a class out of which 31 percent failed to make the grade. He rated second lowest in the number of demerits accummulated enroute.

Qualifying for an officer in the signal corps necessitates a certain amount of training and study in all the other branches. At Fort Monmouth, where he was sent following completion of his work in Radar School at Camp Murphy, Florida, the routine of study — electricity, map reading, photography, radio, all forms of administrative and tactical knowledge—leaves little free time. Officer candidates are busy from five in the morning to ten at night. Such duties as shaving and shoe shining are often performed after the lights are out. Haircuts required exactly ninety seconds, just time enough to begin at the top and plow a spiral around the head. Discipline is never relaxed for an instant; Ft. Monmouth students wear, day and night, orange armbands and name plates above their pockets for rapid identification. Since every minute counts, they frequently skip eating in order to attend to details of haircut and standing in line for chocolate bar rations.

Lt. Halle looks hard and streamlined and handsome in his uniform, twenty - eight pounds lighter than when he left Carmel last May. In spite of the fact that icicles hung from all the eaves back in New Jersey, and hand-over-hand marathons above icy water hazards provided an occasional dunking, he talks enthusiastically of his experiences of the past months.

"Though," he adds, "there's nothing like California. Every-

Bonnie Withers Joins Staff of Call Bulletin

Bonnie Withers, Carmel Theater manager, is leaving April 11 to take a position on the Call-Bulletin editorial staff in San Francisco.

Fred J. Walker, city editor for the Call-Bulletin, came to Carmel last week end and offered her the position after reading her article on the feature page of the Navy Blue Issue of the Pine Cone Cymbal.

With several years' experience on the Portland Oregonian and a period on the editorial staff of the San Francisco Chronicle, Mrs. Withers is no stranger to newspaper work which she has interspersed with radio. In the latter field she has done publicity, continuity and dramatic reading on NBC. She also produced the Feminine Fancies program for a year.

She came here in August of last year to take over the management of the Carmel Theater. Her successor has not yet been announced.

Children Write Up Celebrities For Big School Issue

Col. Roger Fitch, commandant of Fort Ord, was interviewed this week by a seventh grade Sunset School boy for the thirteenth Annual School Issue of the Pine Cone Cymbal which will appear next Friday and promises to be the biggest, finest, most exciting school issue since the tradition of allowing the students to put out one number of The Pine Cone each year was inaugurated in 1930.

This week Sunset boys and girls have interviewed and written up Carmel artists, writers and outstanding citizens, and are covering subjects of adult interest rather than confining their copy to school affairs as heretofore.

Another departure from custom will occur when high school girls supplant the social editor next week to gather and write up the Pine Needles. High school boys will be responsible for news originating in the police department, the city court, fire department and the various other established news sources. A student reporter will write up the City Council meeting which will be conducted by students. The feature page will carry editorials and poetry by the children, and it will be recalled that an editorial by Eade Jordan in last year's School Pine Cone was the inspiration for Carmel's eminently successful recreation program the following summer.

The paper promises to be appealing to the eye as well as interesting, as the art students are making linoleum blocks to be reproduced throughout the issue.

The townspeople are already aware, through the activities of the students in gathering their interviews this week, that this issue is going to be something special in the way of school numbers, and are looking forward to next Friday's Pine Cone and an opportunity of seeing Carmel from the uncompromising viewpoint of the young.

Babette De Moe To Train for Plane Ferrying

On May 26 Babette De Moe begins training for the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Service.

It will be no surprise to Carmel friends of popular Babette De Moe — that aviation-minded young daughter of Mrs. E. C. Poklen — that she is definitely "going places." It will be recalled that when she qualified for her private pilot's license, four years ago, after a brief six weeks of training at Sky Harbor airport in Illinois, 16-year-old Babette was the youngest holder of such a license in the United States. Then, last August, following her graduation from Principia Junior College in Elsah, Illinois, she spent three months in intensive preparation to be a Link instructor, learning to teach meteorology and navigation.

It was as a Link instructor in the advanced training group that Babette was called last January to Texas A & M College, and so eager was she to acquaint herself with her new duties that she crossed Carmel Christmas festivities off her calendar and showed up at College Station, Texas, a good two weeks ahead of time.

Then last summer the government decided there should be no more advanced Link training given with the elementary instruction offered at Texas A & M. Babette had plenty of offers to go on with this especial work elsewhere,

NO BLEEDING HERE

One of the finest examples of a charitable organization's faith with the public was the action of the Carmel Red Cross in ceasing solicitations last week the moment it reached its quota, though that quota was achieved a week before the drive was to end. With the machinery of the drive in full swing, as it was when the quota was reached, several thousand dollars more could have been collected with no difficulty, a temptatjon hard to resist since the cause is so worthy. But the Red Cross did not take advantage of its position. It had received what it asked for and it asked no more.

An indication of how the public appreciates this scrupulous fairness is in the fact that after Carmel people were fully informed that the drive had ended, they voluntarily brought to Red Cross Headquarters $1200 this week raising the total to $20,000 for this area. —Wilma Cook.

Merchants to Give Prizes, Not Ribbons For Kite Festival

The Let Us Return to Tradition and Give The Children Prizes Instead of Ribbons Because They Like Them Better Anyway faction has prevailed. Prizes instead of Ribbons will be given to the winners of the Kite Festival to be held April 10 on Bardarson Field at the High School.

A spurt of activity on the part of the L.U.R.T. etc. faction late this week elicited enthusiastic support among the business people of the town. Asked if they would contribute items of merchandise from their shops or a cash donation not over $2.00, with which to buy prizes, those who so far have been consulted have readily consented. "Of course — Glad to—We used to; don't see why it was ever stopped—" were the various responses.

The list of contributors, now in the process of being made up, will be published in full in next week's issue of the Pine Cone Cymbal. Those who have not yet been asked to contribute and wish to participate may phone the Pine Cone Cymbal office, Carmel 2, or Ernest Calley.

News from Britain Tells of Great Work of 'Bundles'

By HARRIET ROBERTS

A fortnight ago, when I wrote to say that I hoped that "Bundles United — America-Britain" could supply odd articles that Army and Navy wives might want for their Carmel housekeeping, I feel that, perhaps, I rather put the cart before the horse. I should have suggested first to our many kind friends in Carmel and the Monterey Peninsula whose generosity has made the Bundles Thrift Shop in the past so rich in quaint, useful and beautiful things that we can only go on being of use to our welcome visitors from the Armed Forces if Carmel residents (and with Carmel I include, of course, Monterey, Pebble Beach and Pacific Grove) continue their search for White Elephants and garments for Bundles. We know that in the past this generous search has not only been into closets and cupboards where disused things are kept, but that it has often included in the class of White Elephants many really loved Lares and Penates, given for the sake of our British Allies and our American Navy and Merchant Marine. We know, too, that this generosity grows more difficult as all sorts of things grow scarcer, but American generosity has always been equal to the need of it.

Perhaps it might be as well to say a word about that need. In our relief that the great bombing raids over England have, for some time, been successfully fought off, we are apt to forget that small sudden raids still cause much damage and suffering. In the month of February alone nearly 400 people lost their lives. On January 25 the Dowager Marchioness of Reading, Chairman of Women's Voluntary Services in Great Britain wrote to the National President of Bundles for Britain:

"I have just come back from a trip in which there were raids certainly every day I was down in that particular county, and where a raid was taking place, on one occasion, whilst I was speaking.

"These things of course, do not demand front line any more, and it is not so thrilling as it used to be for the bulk of people who have got another theater of war to watch, but nevertheless work has to be done, and that competently and well, because the sufferers are that much more warwearied and have that much more strain behind them. We have, as you doubtless heard, had a renewal of hostilities here in London, and some of the places you have visited have suffered quite considerably. The attack on our schools and the death of so many small children has, of course, been a very great shock to everyone concerned.

"I was shocked to see some of the small towns which have so recently been raided several times. They are quite near the sea and the raiders rush in on them without any notice beforehand. I went to one which had had thirty such attacks and where people had suffered greatly. The pathos of it was very moving. It is extraordinary that, in spite of all this, people will come to a meeting, knowing that they are presenting a potential target, and everywhere I went we had never less than 200 and mostly 500 people at the meetings."

It must make us more anxious to help these little seacoast towns when we remember that 'There, but for the grace of God, is Carmel.'

It is sometimes hard to keep a personal feeling when working for a society and for an ally so far away. So it gave me a thrill to see a letter sent to Mrs. Burleigh Murray, the founder, in Carmel, of Bundles for Britain and Bundles for America. Bundles-United had sent blankets to England, and among them was one still marked with Mrs. Murray's name. The Secretary of The Royal Northern Hospital writes:

"The patients in this Hospital are enjoying and greatly benefitting by the warm and very charming blankets received from Bundles for Britain. On one of these we found a small label bearing your name and we welcome the opportunity of thanking personally one of the many kinds friends in America who, with ready sympathy and practical help have so generously contributed towards our needs in these days of trouble and anxiety . . . On behalf of the Board of Management and the patients in the hospital I should like to send you an expression of very warm gratitude and appreciation, not only for the gift itself,

AAUW Meets at Durein Home to Hear Anne Olson

By MISS LUCILLE TURNER

Meeting in the spacious living room of Mrs. Ted Durein on the mesa, with its sweeping view of the length of Carmel Valley, the hills, Point Lobos and the sea, the American Association of University Women heard Miss Anne Olson, County Home Demonstration Agent, discuss the newer discoveries in nutrition and "the art of wartime living," on Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Olson reported some of the latest discoveries, not yet published, of Dr. Morgan and Dr. Cruess, of the nutrition department of the University of California.

The speaker explained how to get the most food values for the family, under wartime restrictions and shortages, what can be done under the point system of food distribution, and the importance of educating the public in the scientific role of vitamins, minerals and the general food substances, in attaining health and efficiency. Under such a plan, the people of England have greatly improved their health, in the face of the most devastating war conditions.

Miss Olson briefly outlined plans for demonstrations and lectures in the county, in preservation of foods, fruits, vegetables and meats.

Tea and a social half hour preceded the talk. Miss Frances Whitehead of Pacific Grove, president of the Monterey Peninsula branch of the association, presided at the meeting.

One Can Learn to Navigate Now at Adult School

The class in Celestial Navigation will be resumed Tuesday, April 6, 7:30 p.m., at the Carmel Sunset school room No. 3 under the direction of Mr. W. E. Viljoen. Note the date. Mr. Viljoen is a competent practical navigator, as well as master of the theory.

The course is intended for the many who, while wishing to navigate have been frightened away from attempting it by the many scholarly and dumbfounding works on the subject with the seemingly impenetrable haze of strange and erudite terms.

The student is offered subject matter that will enable him to master the slight astronomical knowledge necessary to a clear understanding of a subject, not nearly so difficult as it often appears.

The course is ideal for the person who plans to enter either the navy, or the transoceanic Ferry Command, or perhaps the Merchant Marine as Navigation Officer; or for the man who plans to navigate his own craft some day to foreign shores.

The latest system in navigation is taught for plotting a latitude and longitude fixed with aid of either sun, stars or planets. The method is that used by the U. S. Navy, and U. S. Air Forces for transoceanic flights.

Beginners may enter, and a special class will be formed for them if desirable. Women are by no means barred, for they too may well find openings for the use of a knowledge of celesial navigation. There is of course no charge for the course. E. O. S.

John B. Dennis

By ELIZABETH K. ELLIOTT

Last week we lost from our community life a man who for more than twenty years has contributed to its welfare—John B. Dennis.

Quietly and with dignity as he had lived, he slipped away from us, leaving a trail of happy memories. For four years he served faithfully on the city council, maintaining always a sane and practical viewpoint and ever having at heart the real good of Carmel. A staunch churchman always, he was for many years vestryman of All Saints', Carmel, and of St. John's, Del Monte.

Those of us who knew him best were enriched by his sterling qualities which included a kindly and generous nature and a delightful sense of humor. Devoted husband, faithful friend, valued citizen and true Southern gentleman, he will be greatly missed.

Membership Drive For Concert Assn. Closes Saturday

The annual drive for members for the Monterey Peninsula Community Concert association will close this Saturday evening, April 3. Since no single admissions are sold for individual concerts, those interested will need to buy memberships this week, as the association accepts after this week no further members, with the exception of persons moving here after the close of the drive. Money is refunded to those moving away.

Three concerts are guaranteed and a fourth will be held if enough new members are enrolled. Artists are chosen by a local committee from world famous artists under the management of Columbia Concerts, Inc., New York.

The local association is affiliated with 349 other Community Concert associations throughout the United States. Memberships are transferable and may also be used for concerts in Salinas. The local association holds its concerts in Pacific Grove.

Concerts will be held on Sunday afternoons and the New York booking bureau has promised no conflict with Carmel concerts.

Such artists as Igor Gorin, The Trapp Family Singers, Gen. Platoff Don Cossacks, Mona Paulee, Lansing Hatfield, Edwina Eustis, Paul Makovsky, Moissaye Boguslawski and Mieczyslaw Munz have already been presented.

Adult memberships are $5 and students $2.

Headquarters are at Staniford's, Abinante's, the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce and the Grove Pharmacy.

Ted Leidig

Today at 2 o'clock private services will be held in Monterey for Ted Leidig, young Carmel flyer who was killed last Friday when his Navy scout bomber crashed while taking off for a routine flight from Floyd Bennett field. A lieutenant in the Navy Air Corps, he was 29 years old at the time of his death. The body was brought here with an honor guard of three officers of his unit.

He was born in Carmel, attended Sunset, Monterey high school, Menlo Junior College and was graduated from Stanford. For a while he was employed by the Matson Navigation company, and was preparing for a career in the diplomatic service when war became imminent and he enrolled at Pensacola with John Campbell, another Carmel boy who had been his school chum and was best man at his wedding when he married Miss Doraine Geiger last June at Corpus Christi where both boys had been sent for their advanced flight training.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leidig, Carmel, his sister, Mrs. Jean Draper, and his brother, Martin Leidig.

Grieved at the death of his friend, Lt. Campbell wrote home this week:

"Words at a time like this are always inadequate. Especially so in this case.

"Ted Leidig has been my life long friend. I guess there is no one in Carmel who is more widely and truly liked than Ted, which is quite understandable because he genuinely liked everyone himself. But not only for that rea-

Mrs. Cranston in Legislative Box for Mme. Chiang's Speech

Mrs. Helen Clark Cranston returned to Carmel after a weekend trip to San Francisco where she occupied a seat in the legislative section of Madame Chiang Kai-Shek's audience at the Civic Auditorium, as a guest of Senator Tickle.

The impressions she brought back were deep and vivid — the fragile beauty of the speaker, in her sheath-like gown of black and gold, the amazing fullness and warmth of the voice emanating from that small body, her freedom from all rancor and insistence that future progress depends upon the elimination of every hate.

Mrs. Cranston heard for the first time a rendition of the Chinese national anthem and thrilled to the way that tremendous audience took Madame Chiang to their hearts. "It was an unforgettable occasion," she reports. "There was such pageantry and beauty — the music of the military band, the parade of the army, navy, marine and coast guard colors, the cineraria bordered stage, bright with flowering branches of peach and cherry and almond, and against a background of heavy black velvet with its central design a wheel of silver and pale blue, shot across by silver forked lightning, flanked by brilliant red Chinese characters, tiny Madame Chiang Kai-Shek holding that vast audience in the hollow of her hand."

The meeting is open to all with a 25 cent admission charge to non-members. This will include tea. The occasion will be a real treat for Carmel as Mrs. Poulsen is outstanding in her work with flowers.

Forest Rangers Show at Carmel Friday and Sat.

Filmed in color, "The Forest Rangers," starring Fred MacMurray and Paulette Goddard is assurance of a good evening's entertainment on the Carmel Theater program for tonight and Saturday. Paulette is stunning as the eastern girl who proves her merit in a great forest fire and Fred MacMurray is in a perfect role as a district ranger. He sings "Tall Grows the Timber" in this picture and the familiar "Jingle, Jangle, Jingle" is a theme song throughout. The late Lynn Overman is cast as a crabby old man with a heart of gold.

"For Me and My Gal" plays Sunday, Monday and Tuesday with the regular Sunday continuous show starting at 2 o'clock. This is the big show MGM put together as a "vaudeville of World War I," around the voice and charm of Judy Garland. She is supported by George Murphy, Gene Kelly and Ben Blue, among others, in the story that starts with show business in 1916 when a week at the Palace was heaven to vaudeville performers.

Escaping Nazi Army, Broekhoffs' Friends Arrive in California

Mr. and Mrs. Broekhoff of Los Altos who have a summer home on Scenic Drive in Carmel, were rejoicing this week in the successful conclusion of their two years of effort to effect the entry into this country of two Belgian friends.

The story of the refugees, Anne and Rose Feigenbaum, is an Odessy of flight before the advancing German army. They fled from their home in Antwerp, Belgium, as the Germans approached. The roads on which they traveled, choked with other refugees, were subjected to machine-gun fire before which the sisters saw their friends fall.

A bridge was blown up as they approached it. They took shelter in southern France until the advance of the Nazi army again put them to flight. Crossing the Spanish border illegally, they were captured and imprisoned. When their release was finally effected, they made their way to America and to their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Broekhoff, in Los Altos, stopping off in New York first to take out first citizenship papers.

Paul Mays Picture Publicizes Artists For Victory Show

To assist in publicizing the Artists for Victory Exhibition to be held in Carmel Gallery May 1 as part of the Victory War Fund Drive, Paul Mays has painted a picture on a patriotic theme which the committee hung in the Bank of Carmel Wednesday.

About fifty by thirty-six inches in size, the painting depicts the American heroes of the past, George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, and the heroes of the present, members of the armed forces grouped about the statue of liberty and the flag.

There will be a reception at the May 1 exhibit at the gallery, admission to be paid in war stamps. Bonds will be awarded to the artists who have entered prize winning pictures and bonds will be sold at the gallery.

If you happen to be going by PARSONS remember to stop in and see the beautiful old English silver they have just received. We are very lucky to have the opportunity of buying some of these rare pieces that have previously been absent from the American market, and one of the most interesting is the revolving - top breakfast dish. The shape is elliptical with a lid which slides under to reveal a perforated removable tray, with another tray beneath to catch gravy, and a compartment for hot water beneath that to keep the food warm.

Among the other lovely Victorian, Sheffield and sterling pieces are fluted hot water kettles, tea and coffee urns with spirit lamp beneath, and a stunning pair of candelabra, to say nothing of the really charming four-piece tea set of chased silver.

Some adorable new pill-boxes have arrived at MERLE'S! Of sterling silver, these cunning things have all been made by hand and have unique and delicate patterns on the lids. Some have rose and other patterns, one a minstrel, another a Saint Christopher, and one especially clever one made from a French five-franc piece. The sizes run from a small coin to one about as big as a box of pocket matches.—K. M.

Frank Hefling Favors House Numbers for Carmel

Yesterday was Frank Hefling's day on the Carleton's delivery wagon and among the orders on the truck was a box of groceries directed to J. Serra at the intersection of Camino Del Monte and Alta Way.

It was a new account to Hefling and he made inquiries in the neighborhood as to where he could find Mr. Serra. One of the residents of the locality thought the name sounded familiar but couldn't say just where he lived. Another suggested that maybe this Mr. Serra had moved recently into the neighborhood.

Hefling, standing disconsolately by his truck hailed a passing youngster.

"Do you know where I could find J. Serra, son?"

"Could that be the party you're looking for?" the boy asked pointing up to the statue of Father Junipero Serra that has stood in its shrine at that spot for some years. Hefling then became aware that this bright morning was April 1.

With Dog and Gun Carmel Police Chase Car Thief

Two San Francisco police officers were in Carmel yesterday to obtain the release to their custody of Waldo Marvin Owens, charged with desertion from the army and car theft. Carmel police captured Owens Tuesday, lost him and then got him back after a movie thriller chase that included gunfire and bloodhounds—well, anyway, George A. Wishart's Doberman which is a sure enough tracker.

Owens' adventures, which terminated so dramatically in Carmel, began in San Francisco when he was arrested for attempting to crash the reception given for Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, and was placed in the guard house at Fort Mason when it was discovered he was AWOL from McClellan Field, Sacramento, since February 10.

He escaped within three hours and stole an automobile from a storage garage, according to the statement he made to Chief Roy Fraties after his capture, and headed for Los Angeles.

Dropping in on Carmel on his way South he failed to keep his cruising speed within legal limits and was arrested for speeding by Carmel police on Carpenter street. In front of the police station he broke away from the officer who had him in custody, ran down Dolores street to the accompaniment of shots fired by the policeman, and disappeared at Monte Verde and 7th.

Followed a combing of the town by police officers, broadcasts of the fugitive's description over the police radio and a calling out of the dog, without results, until after nightfall, when an army truck coming from Point Joe to Carmel was flagged down by a hitch-hiker's flash light. The officer in charge of the truck recognized the hitch-hiker from the radio description and turned Owens over to the Carmel police who lodged him in the Monterey jail where he remained until San Francisco police officers claimed him yesterday.

Quartet Presents A Fine Program Beautifully Done

By JAFFREY HARRIS

The Belgian Piano-String Quartet, like Caesar, came, saw and conquered, and the Carmel Music Society again deserves praise for a good choice of talent for its series. A fine program was beautifully performed to an interested and appreciative audience. It was quite a surprise to see the low height of the music stands, but this unusual feature has distinct advantages, as it not only gives the players better opportunity to co-operate in their ensemble playing, but brings the audience and players closer than when the music sheets obscured them from each other.

A quartet is truly the democracy of music. Each player has his say, none is the dictator, and it is a case of all for one and one for all. And the Belgian Quartet evidenced a unity of musical thought in performance that I have hardly heard excelled even in the good old days of the Kneisel and Flonzaley string quartets.

Each of these players was impeccable, in bowing, intonation, and taste, and the fusion of the four parts was equally accurate and artistic. For myself, I was particularly interested in the workman-like manner these artistic effects were produced, without effort or pomp and circumstance.

To be sure, one's eye often fell upon the cellist more than the others, but I had the feeling that he probably was enjoying the music as much as his listeners were, and he must have been else he could not have produced those tonal delicacies. I am sure many listeners got a new appreciation of what can be produced in sound from a violin, viola or cello, and of ensemble piano-playing when displayed by very gifted hands.

The Mozart was a happy choice, with its beautiful slow movement that certainly must have showed the way to Beethoven, who was his admirer. The violin solo bit here was entrancing; and the whole quartet was done with impeccable taste.

It is a far cry from Mozart to Tansman. Here is ultra-modern music by a Polish composer in his forties, now resident here. The music is super-rhythmic, and abounds in the most modern chord treatment, which of course is anathema to some non-understanding ears, but very stimulating to others, but I think both factions would agree that there were a number of moments of great beauty, especially in the Nocturne. New effects were abundant, and many types of "atmosphere," including marching, folksong feeling, festival dancing, nostalgia, and the like.

It was well that this exciting but not so integrated music should be followed by a major work of architectural type and proportions, where the listener could follow the several identifiable melodies through the myriad musical adventures of Brahms' genius. It seems to me the coherence of this music is better for the nerves as well as for the enrichment of our souls than the palpitating excitements of the over-rhythmic super - chordists, even though they have their moments. At any rate, I am glad the dessert was in the middle of the fare, and that the concert closed (especially in these rationed times) with thick, juicy and superlative beefsteak.

Captain Shelburn Robison, now an instructor at Santa Clara University, was in Carmel Sunday, joining Mrs. Robison and their two sons, Robin and Sam, who had arrived the preceding Friday.

OUR CHINESE PIONEERS

By Joseph Hitchcock

Much has been written about our early pioneers, Father Serra, Portola, and their followers. The lowly Indians also were mentioned, as were Tiburcio Vasquez and Joaquin Murieta though they were notorious outlaws. As a result, our local history has been one-sided.

Here I am going to give credit where credit is due and try to give you a word picture of the forgotten men who contributed much to the history that we are justly proud of, our Chinese pioneers.

The Chinese coolies, as they are called, were brought here in droves, perhaps against their will, who knows, but they gave much and asked very little in return. They were tremendous workers, but their dependability remains in memory as their outstanding quality. As an example, I recall the story of one of our early settlers in the Carmel Valley who had a dairy, and as he had a large family, thought he could rely on his sons to do the milking. But on Saturday nights the boys went to Monterey and forgot to get back on Sunday morning or even on Monday morning, and you know dairies cannot be run like that, so he fired his help, and employed Chinamen to run his dairy for him, with good results.

We are all familiar with the value of the Chinese as workers. They set a record of track laying when the Union Pacific and Central Pacific were built that has never been equalled with all the mechanized equipment, When the Pacific Improvement Co. built their first dam and brought water from the Carmel River to Monterey and Pacific Grove, it was Chinese labor that dug the ditches and laid the pipes. They had two camps, one of five hundred men and the other of two hundred, and the old pipes are still in service.

Some of the old Chinamen were a queer combination. They had the mysticism of the Orient flavored with the witticism of the Occident. A friend of mine was telling me of an old Chinese cook that had worked for his grandfather when his mother was a little girl. The Chinaman was very much interested in the children as they grew up. My friend's mother had a large family. When my friend was born, the old Chinaman came to see the new baby and the mother. After he had given the mother the presents and had seen the new baby, he asked her, "What you callum?" When she said, "We haven't named him yet," the old cook said, "More better you callum Quits."

When we moved down to the Pescaderos Ranch in 1894 there was a Chinese family living there, Wo Hop Jeong, his wife and six children. Six more were born there making a total of six boys and six girls. We were all children together as they were our only neighbors, so we had many happy days together. We always had plenty of milk which we shared with their babies, and they in turn gave us fish, abalones and many Chinese delicacies. I was very much impressed by their mode of life. All their holidays were religious days and always began and closed with their religious ceremonials. Chinese Thanksgiving is one of the outstanding feast days and is celebrated when the moon is full in September. They would set a banquet on a table in the yard, and as the moon rose, everyone sat down to a feast of Chukin Duck, suckling pig, with all the trimmings and fruits that are available at that season of the year.

When Carmel was started, we had no Sunset district. Mr. Devendorf engaged a private teacher to teach the few children that lived near here, and among the children were two or three of the Jeong family. One little girl, Marian, got her first schooling here and afterward the family moved to San Francisco. Marian married a man named Gee, and now lives in Berkeley. She has a daughter, Florence Gee, who last summer won first prize on the "I Am An American Contest." She has an uncle, Loy Gum, who has been working in the 16th street postoffice for many years.

We all remember Quock Sue, better known as Ah Sue, who lived at Stillwater Cove and sold us fish so fresh that they still wiggled in his basket.

When we came to the Pescadero Ranch, there were between 50 and 75 fishermen who came over from Monterey about September and fished for Rock cod, abalones and sea weed until the spring when the salmon and squid season opened in Monterey. Many Chinese worked or farmed in the surrounding country, raising potatoes and beans while others raised truck vegetables, fruit and berries. Mr. Edward Berwick employed only Chinese labor, and I think he had the same crew until they got too old to work. Most every ranch had a Chinese cook who got along well with the other ranch hands. Many descendants of that old generation still live in this county, and every now and again we hear of some achievement of some one of them.

Looking back over the last fifty years, I can say that our colorful history is the results of the combination of all the pioneers including the Chinese. In our own village we still remember Pon Sing who came here to cook for Mrs. Powers and who afterwards conducted our first laundry, and Pon Chung, who is very much in evidence. As a matter of fact, it is hard to imagine Carmel without Pon Chung.

We owe much to the Stilwell family for giving us first-hand information of Chinese art and culture at a time when we are fighting side by side with Chinese soldiers who have given a good account of themselves against great odds with very poor equipment. I hope that I have given a small picture of the forgotten pioneers, as I knew them and learned to love them.

POETRY

TO THE MEADOW-LARK

Gay vagrant winds play on a golden flute
Hid in the grass, the broken phrases trill
Frost-sharp, sun-soft. For seldom is it mute
Save when the sparse grass, satiate, drinks its fill
From fecund storm-clouds, dripping as they speed.
That hour, the flute is silent; but when Spring
Flower-happy, blossoms on the instant head
Bright burgeoned, then the wilder flute-notes ring.
Dew-clear, they mount like upward-flinging rain,
Faster and higher, proud, exultant, sad,
Poignant with love fulfilled, with old love's pain.
Caressing, soft, heart-broken, empty, mad —
This golden flute the winds play. Song-revealed
Here are betrayed the secrets of the field.

—Mary Bulkley.

PREMONITORY APRIL

When freshets shake the river in a surge
And rain winds joust with every armored tree,
Out of that moment of birth's agony
The miracle of summer will emerge.
And I shall suffer in that same strange way.
And wake from incredible dream to find
A bright amazement blazing in my mind,
With no words telling what my heart would say.

I shall have need to be articulate
Despite the throb of music in the air,
And I shall grieve for sounds to utter there,
Knowing no utterance commensurate
With silence earth possesses through long pain
Of frost and freshet and torrential rain.

—Carl John Bostelmann.

AFTER MUSIC

Threads of thought thinning out in quiet hours spun fine to filaments infinitely free to find strange places —
real — not seeming.

I must be gentle — and aware — must hold to things without a name — spaces where words are lost — moments there too alien for our active powers to gather into phrases —

phrases and hours
gossamer wrought silently
into a mood that is no mood — only dreaming in a new being — or an old — somewhere.

—Charles Ballard.

dear boss some time ago i endeavored to uphold the thesis that those amusing albeit awesome insects popularly known as termites have some in caps brains and that they have a strong tendency to use them which is more than you can say for humans when a rumor is spread that soap is going to be rationed do they think that the soap they buy up is going to last out the war and what the heck do they care whether anybody else has any soap or not two question marks to be placed in the appropriate places returning to our thesis i wish to bring to your attention other proofs of the intelligence of termites three years ago i received a verbal communication from a correspondent of mine who was a government official in darwin australia inclosed therewith was a photograph of some termite nests found in that distant part of the world they are really quite wonderful structures the particular kind of termite responsible does not seem to specialize in the use of structural timbers in which to pursue its humanly speaking nefarious purpose of making burrows in which to live and move and have its being as i told you last time though you have probably forgotten that by now or havent you question mark but on the other hand they build up huge ant hills as they are called what they make them out of i don't know i could look it up if i wasn't so doggone lazy maybe i will at that to surprise you any how when they are made these ant hills are the shape of an axe i mean with the thick edge in the ground and

SUNSET SCHOOL NEWS

THE ANNUAL KITE FESTIVAL OF CARMEL
Saturday, April 10, 1943

We will meet at 1:15 at Sunset School. The parade will go down Ninth street to Camino Real to honor Mr. White, north to Ocean and up Ocean to the Carmel high school grounds.

Mr. Willis G. White was the founder of this colorful event twelve years ago in Carmel. Mr. White also began the Kite Festival in Fresno, which is still being carried on.

This year the prizes will be ribbons. If you win a ribbon it is something that you can prize and keep for a long time. First prize is a blue ribbon; second prize, white; third prize, red.

Rules

1. The kite must be made by the person entering it.
2. One person may enter only one kite, and in one event.
3. A kite is not a kite unless it can fly so, after being judged the kite must be flown to win.

Divisions

1. Best Made Kite: Kindergarten to Grade 3; Grade 4-5; Grade 6-7, High School.
2. Prettiest and Ugliest: Open to all.
3. Highest Flying Kite: Sunset School, High School.
4. 200-foot Flight Contest: Open to all.

Kite flying is a sport enjoyed by people of all ages, in many parts of the world. It is great fun to feel the tug of an active kite away up in the air. It is also a good foundation for air work to study air currents with kites and the mechanics of kite making.

Dear Mrs. Jordan and Class,—

I am sorry I have not written you and the class sooner, but I have been very busy.

School is certainly enjoyable here and the school work is quite easy. I am now going to California Junior High school. It is quite different. School starts at 8:45 a.m. Noon is from 12:15 p.m. to 1:15 p.m. School lets out at 3:45 p.m. During the school time we have forty-two minute periods with three minutes between for going to and from classes. If you are late you will have to stay at detention class after school.

Tell the boys that gym or P.E. lasts forty minutes. We have four minutes to open our lockers, and get into our gym shorts and shoes. We then have callisthenics, judo, jiu-jitsu, basketball or speedball. Then we have eight minutes at the end for showers and dressing.

There are 210 rooms in the school and for the first few days I kind of got lost.

My home room teacher takes the Pine Cone Cymbal.

It surely seemed hard to start in a new school and make all new friends, but now I enjoy it.

I just received a Mexican 2 peso bill and some stamps that I sent for. I am chairman of the stamp club at school.

I would surely like to be in Carmel now. I would take Carmel for any big city. Our house is only 4 blocks from the school and no hills. We are near Land Park. It has a zoo and a small lake.

Yours for Victory,
Don Stevenson

Planting Squash

Last Friday our family went out to the farm in Carmel Valley. When we got there I had to plant squash. There were forty rows and seventeen hills in each row. My grandfather said if I worked real hard this summer I would get a dollar a day. That will be a lot of money if I save it all.—Barbara Pullman, 5th Grade.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Boys' Sports

Saturday, April 3, the Carmel High School tennis team will play Monterey High school on the Carmel courts.

The first seven on the Carmel tennis ladder will play the first seven on the Monterey ladder. This will be the third tennis tournament of this year and Mr. Marrs, tennis instructor, seems quite sure of a victory, although Monterey has a well prepared team.

This tournament will take place at the Carmel High school courts at 9:30 a.m. We expect a big turn out.—Stanley Ewig.

Triumph

We have reached our goal. The jeep is ours! Loud cheers and hearty applause from all of us to all of us.

It was quite something for a small student body such as ours to attempt such a feat. After all, $900 is a lot of money in any man's language, and we raised that and then some, and we did it in three weeks.

Now, when we see those movies depicting the various war zones, we'll be proudly conscious that we had a part in obtaining a piece of mechanical equipment for some unit on some fighting front, Africa, New Guinea, China or Alaska, it makes no difference to us where our jeep goes. The important fact is that we earned it. We hope it is the first jeep to enter Tokyo or Berlin.

Not Just Freshmen Have Starry Eyes

A six foot two Captain McBride is the reason for Miss Gulmert's starry eyes and breathless manner. She seems to have her head not just in the clouds but in the stratosphere as well. This is a definite reverse from the feelings of us girls. We are pretty sad about losing one of our favorite teachers.

The wedding plans are very indefinite; c'est la guerre (it's the war). She hopes to be married at the Church of the Wayfarer, and every girl dreams, alas in vain, to be one of her bridesmaids. Even if it is impossible for all of us to be bridesmaids, we will all manage by hook or crook to be in, near or around the church as she comes out.—Ann Pierce.

Weather-Wise Ones Can't Argue with Lloyd Rain Gauge

Those Carmel citizens who went about early this year shaking their heads saying "My, oh my, but we are having a dry winter," were not as weather wise as they fancied themselves. This winter Carmel has had only 3.05 inches less rain than the last year according to Dr. Francis E. Lloyd.

Dr. Lloyd, Carmel botanist, who keeps a rain gauge on the roof of his laboratory and makes a hobby of keeping a record of the rainfall for Carmel, reported this week that the rainfall up to March 30 is 16.55 inches. Last year's record up to March 30 was 19.60.

Coffee, Doughnuts and Plans

On Friday morning, March 26, the mothers of primary grade children enrolled in the All Saints' Church school assembled at the parish house, where they were given a surprise treat in the form of coffee and doughnuts by Mrs. Hulsewe, wife of the Rector, and put their heads together for Easter plans for the children. On Saturday, April 24th, an Easter egg hunt will take place at the Pebble Beach home of Mrs. Pliny E. Holt, following a flower pageant to be given by the children.

Those who gathered for the meeting were: Mesdames B. F. Sowell, L. Murphy, Howard Clark, H. Hoeser, E. Cass, Harold Nielsen, Walter Nielsen, G. A. Middleburg, J. P. Coes, G. O. Vestor, L. C. McGarr, W. J. Tocher, D. C. Davis, J. R. Eggleston, G. H. Burnett and the Rev. C. J. Hulsewe.

It was decided to hold quarterly meetings of this group of young mothers, and Mrs. Walter Nielsen was appointed chairman.

CHURCH OF THE WAYFARER

The sermon theme of Dr. James E. Crowther at the Church of the Wayfarer next Sunday morning will be, "A Startling Supposition," based on the words of Jesus, "If I had not come." If such a supposition had been a fact, the impoverishment of the world in almost every realm would be beyond our imagination. We may prize values the more if we envision their loss. Elinor Smith as guest organist will play the following: "Voluntary," Schumann; "A Prayer," Wagner; "A Child's Prayer," Kullak; "Andante," Czerny. The service begins at eleven; visitors are cordially invited.

The Lesson-Sermon will also include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Detach sense from the body, or matter, which is only a form of human belief, and you may learn the meaning of God, or good, and the nature of the immutable and immortal," (p. 261).

Red Cross Bulletins

By MRS. FRANCES DOUD

(from the New York Times, March 18, 1943)

U. S. Sailor Spies Flaw in 'Shamrock'

(Wireless to N. Y. Times)

LONDON, March 17 —Radioman third class Charles Kelley of the United States Navy comes from South Boston and his father Tom comes from South Boston, too, but before that the Kelleys came from County Calway and they knew the difference between and shamrock and a four - leaf clover. Lately that much of Irish tradition was passed down to Charles and as a result the entire interior decorating scheme of an American Red Cross party tonight had to be changed.

It all began when it was decided to transform the weekly cabaret tonight at Rainbow Corner, Red Cross club, into a St. Patrick's Day celebration. Mrs. Sally Elting of Brookline, Mass., and Miss Marguerite Tickle, (daughter of Senator and Mrs. E. H. Tickle of Carmel, California,) both of the Red Cross staff, searched high and low for green crepe paper which in wartime London is not nearly so common, for example, as Brussel sprouts.

However, tucked away in an East End shop they found some and by skilful blending with cellophane put together some "shamrocks of truly magnificent proportions." One in particular was attached to the wall overlooking the staircase where every visiting "eye," whether Irish or not, could not fail to be impressed. The decorators were well pleased. Then last night Kelly, the only gob on the Rainbow Corner House Committee strolled in. At his post this afternoon the young sailor who will be 21 next fourth of July told what had happened. "Mrs. Elting told me to go up and take a gander," he said. "I took a look and it looked all right. Only then I noticed that it had an extra leaf on it."

The offending fourth leaf was promptly taken off and similar corrections were made at other decorated spots through the building. Only, unfortunately in the main lobby some tiny "shamrocks" had been painted on the wall and they had four leaves. Mrs. Elting had to tell Kelley there was nothing she could do about that.

So tonight a celebration with overtones dear to heart of the friendly saint went on in the Rainbow Corner Red Cross Club and a good time was had by all except Charley Kelley. Because by the vicissitudes of war he was on late duty, and did not get near the place.

While the citizens of Carmel are being inconvenienced by a shortage of nurses, fighting men of the American Army and Navy are suffering for want of them.

Miss Louise Baker, assistant area director in charge of nurse recruiting, says, "Feelings of responsibility to their community are keeping many eligible nurses from enlisting in the armed forces. It is in turn the responsibility of your community to release nurses for war duty where they are so desperately needed.

"There are several practical ways of helping nurses serve their country," Miss Baker points out. "One is by cooperating with your local Red Cross Chapter and hospitals in training more nurses aides to relieve the civilian shortage of nurses. This has been only half done. Another is to fill as many home nursing classes as possible with homemakers and their daughters to train them to care for illness at home.

"Then," Miss Baker adds, "every eligible nurse should be urged to arrange her personal life so as to aid her with any personal problems of any nature."

A new reservoir of nursing power has been tapped, with the advancement of the age limit for Army Reserve service to 45 years. All nurses meeting educational, professional and physical requirements are now eligible for assignment as army reserve nurses up to their 45th birthday.

The Army and Navy has urgently asked for a minimum of 36,000 nurses this year. So far Carmel has furnished six of them. The American Red Cross is the official recruiting agency. Carmel chapter is open daily Monday through Friday from ten to 4:30.

Millions of American women whose former major headache was budgeting the family income today face a new mathematical problem . . . how to feed ravenous husbands and children on a meat, cheese and fat ration of 16 points per week for each person.

To help distracted housewives hurdle the initial obstacles of the new rationing system, the American Red Cross Nutrition service has prepared a suggested list of one week's purchases for an average family of four. Designed to feed two moderately active parents and two children between the ages of 7 and 15, the list is high in food value, low in point value, providing vitamins and minerals recommended by nutritionists in available, inexpensive meatcuts.

The list totals 63 points (64 is the maximum for the family) and provides meat for four days and meat alternates on the remaining three. Here are the suggestions:

Meat and cheese:

Meat loaf, 1 pound hamburger, 5 points

Shepherd's pie, 1 pound veal heart, 5 points

Beef and vegetable stew, 2 pounds beef (shank, brisket, or plate, with bone in) 8 points

Roast, 3 pounds pork shoulder, or shank half picnic (bone in) 18 points

Cheese souffle, ½ pound American cheese, 4 points

Fats:

Butter, 1 pound, 8 points

Margarine, with vitamin A, 1 pound, 5 points

Bacon (plate or jowl squares for flavoring, frying, etc.) 1 pound, 5 points

Lard or other shortening, pound 5 points

Total ..... 63 points

This leaves a credit for one point for the following week. The suggested alternates for rationed meats for the remaining two days are fresh fish or poultry, unrationed, and baked beans, obtainable under processed food ration cards. The balance of all the meals can be filled out with unrationed eggs, vegetables, fruit, cereals and breads.

"The rationing program is another good reason why housewives should avail themselves of the opportunity to attend Red Cross Nutrition courses," Mrs. Marion M. Sniffen, director of Nutrition service for the Pacific area, said. "Courses are being planned with special emphasis on nourishing and palatable foods that can be prepared within the ration limits."

Mr. Sidney A. Trevvett, War Fund Chairman of the Carmel Chapter of American Red Cross received the following wire from A. L. Schafer, manager Pacific area office in San Francisco; "Delighted to receive your phone message this morning that Carmel Chapter is over the top. Accept our appreciation and extend same to all workers."

Extract from an Air Cadet's letter: "We had a bit of competition between the different flights here in our squadron as to who could raise the most money for the Red Cross. We put the pressure on the boys, and our total in our Flight was $225.71! I went wild and tied another man here in the barracks at $17.00 — the most given by any one man. I still have a little money left. I'd rather give it to the Red Cross than spend it on something foolish though. Not a bad showing for 58 fellows is it? ($225.71.)

Lt. Dave Hagemeyer Lions Club Guest

Dr. F. V. Randol brought his son-in-law, Lt. David Hagemeyer, home on a short leave from Camp Roberts, as a guest to the Lions Club dinner meeting Tuesday night at the Pine Inn.

The Lions had occasion to remember an absent member, Ted Jerstad, now in training in a merchant marine school in the Bay region, when it was announced that he had sent a gavel to Lloyd Weer, president of the organization.

News from Britain About 'Bundles' which is indeed most helpful, but also for your interest and sympathy with the people of the old country which is somewhat bruised and battered."

It made our work here seem very real when I remembered that my husband's brother is one of the managers of the Royal Northern hospital and I entered it last to visit a niece of his who had had an operation there. I wondered how many English friends of Carmel residents had been helped, but could only reply to Bundles for Britain, not knowing any individual to whom to write. Some of the letters which Bundles for Britain receives are very touching. Mrs. Barlow, of South-East London, a poor district, writes that the hospital where she had had her baby was bombed and caught fire, but she and the baby escaped. She was given a 'lovely parcel of baby's clothes' from Bundles for Britain and wrote to thank us from her soldier husband. She says she "will be proud one day when I can tell my baby that America sent her her first baby clothes when all went wrong."

A girl of sixteen writes from Grimsby, Lincolnshire, that town of fisher folk and mine sweepers, to thank Bundles for Britain for socks for her father, who is a merchant seaman and her brother who is in the submarine service. There are seven brothers below her, she writes; she is the only girl and does all the washing. "I will leave it to you to guess how much there is. Please will you ask someone to write to me and tell a little about America. I am writing this letter during an air raid; I am in a Morrison shelter. I will close now as mother is putting the light out, the raiders are overhead. (Signed) Joyce Dunke, 28 Duke Street.

One cannot help hoping that from such seeds many Victory gardens of international friendship and understanding may grow.

son—there were so many reasons, so many other qualities endearing him to others.

"His enthusiasm and his joy of the spirit — inner happiness you might call it — were contagious, and a few moments spent with him were a tonic to any man. I know this to be true because such was Ted's effect upon me from the first days I have known him.

"He was so clean, so very clean in every way. It was one of the many things about him. You could see it in his eyes; you could confirm it in his speech.

"I wish my words could do Ted true justice. Unfortunately they don't seem to.

"To his family I do want to say this: Thank you forever more for giving to the Village of Carmel such a son, and for giving to me the privilege of the deepest friendship I have ever known. God bless him and keep him for us."

Willard Wheeler, friend of Ted Leidig's parents, who saw the boy grow up writes:

"A vivid mental picture comes to me, of Ted Leidig with his fine mind at work. It was a directors' meeting of an unusually successful group of local dramatic players. Ted was secretary. I can still see this handsome youth taking notes, and wholly unruffled as plans and resolutions came in volleys from the dozen animated directors.

"I marveled that Ted never asked for any complicated statement to be repeated, and then upon request would read each conclusion with intricate thoughts clarified, condensed and in their due sequence. Ted's was indeed a trained mind; his a poised adult's head on youthful shoulders, and with a body that radiated clean vigorous health; and withal, a warm cooperating personality that avoided the retarding frictions of group activities.

"Such is the priceless equity that has been lost by our country in the death of Lieut. Theodore Leidig of Carmel when his Navy plane crashed in New York on March 25. Ted had sensed our inevitable part in the World War. With his lifelong friend Johnnie Campbell he enlisted in the Navy flying forces. Both won their wings and became lieutenants. Ted was made an instructor at various flying schools, where his trained mind and tactful leadership contributed greatly in shaping up hundreds of new flyers for active service. Patiently he thus served his country, and was about to realize his goal of overseas service when he was killed.

"The personal loss to Carmel is beyond measure. Ted was born here 29 years ago, and through Sunset and Monterey High school days he won a host of admiring friends among teachers and students. At Stanford he was equally popular. Adults, too, had a keen interest in Ted's career.

"To Mr. and Mrs Leidig, to his wife and to his sister, Mrs. Jean Draper, and to his brother Martin, and to his comrades in arms, goes the deep sympathy of the community. No, Ted did not die in vain even though he had not won his goal of service abroad. He had most valuably trained hundreds for that, and thus had served on the home front to a degree permitted few Americans. Ted's name on the Memorial Stone on Ocean avenue will long remind Carmel of the invaluable services this outstanding citizen has rendered his country."

but an idea was already forming in her blonde head. She wanted time to get in extra flying hours, and in the meanwhile she took a secretarial job with one of the professors at A & M.

Orianna Chappell, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Chappell of Berkeley and grandaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Hamilton of Carmel Highlands, is Babette's pal, and had planned to take a secretarial position at A & M in order to be near her friend. She arrived at College Station shortly after Babette's job as Link instructor blew up, and when Babette confided her secret aim — to join the WAF's — she immediately produced her savings account and insisted that they set out together.

The two girls accordingly went to Dallas, hoping to see Jacqueline Cochran. They didn't get to interview the famous flyer herself, but through her secretary they made their application for the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Service. For Orianna, too, in spite of the fact that she had never flown a plane, learned that she could qualify. She needed 35 flying hours, and from her test with the Link coordinator, it was determined that she would certainly be good. (Babette underlines the word "good" in her letter home descriptive of their Dallas trip.)

Babette, herself, lost no time in Dallas. She passed her army pilots' physical examination, had her flight records approved, and in addition obtained a license as third-class radio operator. Applicants for the WAF's must qualify for a commercial pilot's license with 500 flying hours, have 200 h.p. rating, have cross country experience, be up on American history and literature, with at least a high school education, and be between the ages of 21 and 35. Babette won't be 21 until next month. So it will be necessary for her to wait until May 26 to embark on her chosen career.

On that date both Orianna Chappell and Babette De Moe will begin a five and a half months' course in the Women's Flying Training Detachment in Texas. At the end of that time, if they have proved their right to wear wings, they will be issued their uniforms and have headquarters at an Army air base, where they will be given all the privileges of regular Army officers, in the use of club rooms, etc. The job of the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Service is that of delivering planes from factories to Army bases—no glorified task, but a hard, grueling grind.

While Babette and Orianna were in Dallas, they stayed with Babette's brother and his wife, Ensign and Mrs. Earl T. De Moe, Jr. Ensign De Moe is an instructor in aviation there.

Big League Star Baseball Coach At Pre-Flight

DEL MONTE, April 2 — The appointment of Lieut. Jesse T. Hill of Corona, Calif., as varsity baseball coach at the U. S. Navy Pre-Flight School here, was announced today by Lieut. M. J. Gary, director of athletics, as a call for players went out to all officers and enlisted men and cadets of the third, fourth and fifth battalions.

Lieut. Hill, a former star at the University of Southern California, has had considerable experience in organized baseball, having played with Hollywood and Oakland of the Pacific Coast League; St. Paul of the American Association; Newark of the International League; and New York, Washington and Philadelphia of the American League. Last season he was co-coach of the Pre-Flight team at St. Mary's College, Calif., that won twelve and lost two during the season.

A schedule is now being formed and the first game will be played either April 17 or 18, if a suitable opponent can be found. Until a field is constructed at the school, the team will use the Monterey park as its home field. Due to restriction in travel the schedule will contain teams within a radius of 250 miles of Del Monte.

The opening workout is scheduled for Monday (April 5) with Lieut. (jg) Howard Haak as Lieut. Hill's first assistant.

Mawdsley Appointed Carmel City Clerk

Saidee Van Brower in the election for the office of city clerk. Commenting on the occasion last night, he said:

"I've always been glad that Saidee defeated me and was thereby able to finish in office. I was induced to run against her through pressure from outsiders. But now I am gratified with the appointment. Nothing could give me greater satisfaction than to serve the city and work in cooperation with others."

He is trained in the work he is now undertaking as he served as a government official at his home in Lancastershire, England, where he was clerk to the rural district council and accountant of the land authority.

Jack London's Valley of the Moon read by the fireside during the last war was the impetus that sent him with his wife to Carmel in April 1922. His children were born here, Peter C., now a student at the University of California and Audrey in the ninth grade at Carmel high school. During his early residence here he was engaged in the real estate business serving as president of the Monterey Peninsula Realty Board in 1928-29. At one time he conducted a University of California extension class in real estate and real estate appraisal, and as he became a citizen himself, he tutored others in preparing for it.

He is an auditor and accountant, and since 1929 has been financial adviser to a number of Carmel business men.

Busy and deeply engrossed in whatever work he is engaged in, yet he always manages to find free hours on Sunday to range over the hills and along the coast with his children on the walks that have become a family tradition.

Mayor McCreery on Memorial Committee

In anticipation of the Memorial Day ceremonies to be held in Devendorf Plaza at the memorial stone the monument committee has appointed Mayor P. A. McCreery to fill the vacancy on the committee created when Keith Evans enlisted in the army.

The ceremony conducted under the auspices of the local chapter of the American Legion will follow the pattern of the Armistice Day program of last year: brief addresses by the Legion commander and the legion chaplain, the reading of the military burial service by an army chaplain, a firing squad from Fort Ord giving the three volley salute followed by taps.
